

Title II was enacted in response to a problem: companies were overstepping their bounds. It would be naive to think that they would not again rush to do so if given the chance. Net Neutrality protects the internet that the American people rely on for almost everything. You say you are against regulation. I am also against regulation. But if we do not regulate the companies, they will regulate the internet, and destroy the freedom of choice we now enjoy.

Freedom for the companies is oppression for the consumer: the American people. I wish for freedom for the American people. Therefore we must regulate the companies.
